

ONE PRECIOUS LIFE

A film by
Treyden Chiaravalloti & Nathan Hirschaut featuring Tree Jenny

SYNOPSIS

Inspired by the true story of Jenny Smith, a legendary environmental activist who has planted over half a million trees, One Precious Life poetically documents Jenny's heroic journey to finding her life's purpose.

Through struggle, pain, and confusion Jenny must listen to nature's guidance as she searches to remember the true reason for why she is alive. Filled with experience, she comes to realize the answers have always been in the innocence of her younger self.

Both an intimate narrative and an environmental film, One Precious Life is a boundary-breaking movie that addresses our climate crises through an emotional and personal story.

1/3 of all proceeds from all of our screenings will go to the tree-planting organization Community Carbon Trees.

FEATURING JENNY SMITH

Jenny Smith is the courageous leader and Founder of Community Carbon Trees! Jenny has devoted over 17 years to plant more than 556,000 trees. Her work to build community, protect biodiversity, and reverse climate change is a model for how all people can coexist with nature. Learn more about Jenny here.. You can follow Jennifer on Instagram @TreeJenny

Certified Auditor Co2 Earth University 2014 - Jennifer completed the program at Earth University in 2014 to become a certified auditor of carbon dioxide under international guidelines. Jennifer is trained to calculate carbon footprints to determine baselines for sequestering CO2. In addition, Jennifer completed the agroforestry calculations to determine how much CO2 is sequestered by tropical trees using accepted techniques and practices.

Jenny provides private consulting services to help you understand your carbon footprint, whether for your business or individually. Let her determine how many trees you need to grow over 25 years to offset your CO2 footprint and become carbon neutral.

PRODUCERS STATEMENT

My name is Nathan Hirschaut, I am an artist, producer, and an environmental advocate. I grew up surrounded by the redwood trees in Aptos, Ca. My connection with nature has always been an integral part of my work, as inspiration, as a safe space, and as a home to protect. For that I am eternally grateful.

In March of 2020 I went on a meditation retreat in Egypt and met Jennifer Leigh Smith, president and founder of Community Carbon Trees. I was immediately in awe of her mission and felt called to support her. I called my film maker friend Treyden Chiaravalloti and we got dreaming about how we could participate in her mission to plant 1,000,000 trees.

Treyden and I wanted to tell an environmentally forward story in a new way. Rather than shouting data and statistics at people we wanted to address this issue through feeling. I remember chatting with Treyden and him saying "I want people to watch this film and feel like they are walking in to nature for the first time. I want people to really smell the trees, feel the soil, and understand why it's worth saving and how they inherently a part of it."

This is the mission of our film; to inspire ones love for nature through reminding them that they are unquestionably interconnected with it.

A young girl with blonde hair is sitting on a thick, dark brown tree branch. She is looking directly at the camera with a neutral expression. She is wearing a colorful, rainbow-striped dress. The tree is surrounded by dense green leaves, and the background is filled with more branches and foliage. The lighting is natural, suggesting daylight. The overall mood is peaceful and serene.

"I have no words to describe my wonder and awe about such a precious gem of a movie. Every scene, every breath of this film is sent out to touch us tenderly and deeply."
